The traditional Chinese diet is usually low in fat and high in fiber because of the high consumption of fruits and vegetables and the low consumption of meats. However, growing up in America, Chinese children often eat both Chinese and Western foods, and some of these foods may be high in fat and sugar. Eating too much of these foods may affect our children’s health and increase their risk of becoming overweight. Choosing wisely and preparing a healthy variety of Chinese and Western foods for your children will help them to grow strong.

Help Your Family Have a Low-Fat, Low-Sugar Diet

Choose foods low in fat, low in saturated and trans-fats.

Choose baked or broiled foods instead of fried foods. When eating packaged, processed, convenient and restaurant foods, choose low-fat dishes. Replace high-fat foods with fruits and vegetables, grains, and beans. Also select non-fat or low-fat milk, yogurt or cheese.

Limit the consumption of meat. Eat lean cuts of meat in small portions. Choose soybean, fish, or poultry as an alternative to beef and pork.

The way food is prepared can also make a large difference. Trim off visible fats before cooking. Roast, boil and broil as an alternative to deep-frying. Cut back on cured, smoked and charred barbecued meats.

Limit the availability of soft drinks and snacks such as potato chips, candies and pastries at home.
